The study offers some interesting insights into fashion background. No one has got the authority to affront anyone's fashion trends; in fact fashion trends are decided according to the thinking, likes and dislikes of the people of that particular place or community. Fashion Designers and artists try to bring something unique and different; they expect common people to follow those trends. But sometimes the craze of those designs is not that much effective, rather people find them funny and strange.

Top 8 weirdest fashion trends in the world:

Meggings, All over the world. Trends for male in Fashion World are not much less than woman, an example for this is the "meggings"- male correspondent to leggings which is highly in trend into the lanes of Tokyo, Paris, London and New York. Initially the introduction of leggings in female fashion world was a hot button topic, and now this trend is extended for the males too.

Elf Boot, Mexico. It is a part of the Elven Outfit. These boots are long, pointy and sort of asinine looking, and were in trend in Mexico. Because of this the cowboy boots with stretched tips again came in fashion among the young generation of southern Mexico. It is kind of a trend when the male dress up to get interest of females, but at the end becomes a reason to laugh at. It is really a bombshell trend, then also can be seen in the feet of TV actors, stage showers etc. Elf shoes are officially in at Paris Fashion Week. They are, however, causing something of a sensation on social media, despite the fact that they're coming on the heels of a season in which the "ugly shoe" became must-have footwear, not to mention a year in which fanny packs have come back in full force and Christopher Kane is still making the case for Crocs, most recently lining them with fur.

Gothic Lolitas, Japan. Not to be confused with the Western meaning of the term, the Japanese "Lolita" is an extremely broad fashion subculture that emphasizes cute and stylish Victorian-era clothes. It's "Gothic" sub-style, probably the most famous of the group, is in turn all about darker, gothic aesthetics which in the hands of misinformed Japanese teens basically boils down to "faux-vampire fashion as understood by a 15-year-old." Also: "umbrellas." As in, every other picture of a Gothic Lolita on GIS shows them holding an umbrella because without one they would all apparently look silly.

Eye Jewelry, Netherlands. You know what body part often gets overlooked in the world of fashion? The eyes. Sure, you can paint around them or change their colour with contact lenses, etc., but how often do you see some actual, serious fashion being done on the eye itself? Almost never, because that is a terrible, terrible idea. Well, the Dutch seem to disagree. A new technique that allows small studs made from precious metals to be inserted into the eye was developed more than 8 years ago in Rotterdam, giving teenage girls everywhere an alternative to dating black guys to anger their parents. The Dutch claim that the procedure is perfectly harmless, while eye specialists argue that it is insane; also: potentially dangerous.

Facekini, China. Sometimes new trends in the Fashion world arise due to the needs of the people, an example for this is the introduction of "Facekini". The Facekini was invented by a former accountant Zhang Shifan in the early 2000s, and more than 30,000 have been sold in the last year. The nylon mask is particularly popular among Chinese women because in China, the colour of your skin can represent socio-economic status. Whiter skin is considered to represent wealth and beauty.

Manba, Japan. Japan keeps coming in light, while talking about some peculiar fashion trends. Another example of unusual trends is the Manba. It is a craze very common among the young girls of Japan, who normally date men who are style crazy. Manba is a little varied form of the very famous Ganguro culture which basically accentuates strong makeup and dark complexion. Girls following the Manba trend normally coat their complete face with deep and dark brown, with two circular marks of white colour around their eyes and silver light coloured hair along with wishy-washy makeup and dazzling attire.

Eye Tattoos, Canada. Being an intense practice, people go for eye tattooing for enhancing their aesthetic appearance and the improvement of vision. In this the white part that is cornea of the eye is tattooed. It is medically prescribed method for the persons with scratch marked eye tissues. There are various methods of tattooing of eye, also various options for the success and medical safety of the procedure exists. Tattooing of eye is practice from approximately thousands of years and is now again in trend in Canada.

Bagel Heads, Japan. Getting injected a saline into the forehead to get a bagel/doughnut type shape on forehead is not an easy task. Being such a painful job to get such shapes, people of Japan promoted the trend called as "Bagel head". Media channels ambiguously asserted it as "Japan trend". People here get this done on their forehead during special occasions like subversive fetish gatherings. For this, the person's forehead is to be injected by a medical 300-400cc saline for about duration of 2 hours, and to change the designs the swelled part is sometimes given a down turn at the center.

In summary, I think people should wear what they love and prefer. They should feel free to improvise and use their imagination. Society will be more vivid and gay if people wear what they like without certain boundaries pressing on them.
